

Damaged Goods (A Short Story)

Whitney Thompson is the product of a taboo relationship and nobody in her family wants anything to do with her. Growing up in and out of her foster homes she sees it all. The day she turns eighteen, she's ready to move out and on with her life. All of her plans change when her foster mother, Denise, is murdered. Whitney feels obligated to figure out who killed her and why. She never would have thought she'd learn the things that she did about Denise but more importantly about herself.
