

Divine Secrets of the Ta-Ta Sisterhood: Pledging the Pink Sorority

Several years ago, my gravity-challenged, middle-aged boobs started attracting more attention than those belonging to a Hooters waitress. The guys checking me out, unfortunately, all wore white coats...and I ended up as a pledge of the pink ribbon sorority nobody wants to join...Yet somehow, I found humor in unlikely situations, such as when the nurse warned me not to use hairspray. Forgoing the Aquanet? That is so not a problem with a peach fuzz coiffure. Bad hair day? No, more like a bad hair year. Joanna Chapman stumbled and bumbled through Cancerland on a journey rife with both tears and laughter. In Divine Secrets of the Ta-Ta Sisterhood, she reveals why you should accept those foil-covered casseroles and when to give out Stupid Passes for well-meaning but clueless comments.
