Not illustrated. 1891 Excerpt: ...works, because I believe that the first duty of the Treasurer is to keep his expenditure within his income, year by year. The honorable gentleman has sought to do that, and so long as it is done generally--so long as in cutting down the expenditure on public works the various districts of the colony are treated.-dike--I dont think any honorable member ought to complain about it. I, for one, will certainly not complain so long as the thing is done in that way, although I may feel, as other honorable members will feel, a sense of dissatisfaction at the necessity for retrenchment. So far as I have been able to look into the matter, I do not tli!!!, there has been any difference made in that direction. Finding himself in his present financial position, the Treasurer will have to consider the question raised by the honorable member for Port Fairy. I was going to ask last night if it was proposed to construct any new railways during the current year. I understood the Treasurer to say that ho was waiting for the report of the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Railways before he decided whether any new railways should be proceeded with this year. Mr. MUNRO.--We cannot proceed with the construction of any new railways until we raise another loan. Mr. RICHARDSON.--The Treasurer will certainly have to raise another loan, because railway construction in this country cannot be allowed to stand still; there must be something done. The farming community is settled on the land, every facility has been given to them by Parliament, the Government, and the country to settle on tho land, and they have so much to compete with that every facility for traffic must be given to them to keep them on the land and make them prosperous. I trust the honorable gentleman will see that ...
