

Georgia land and people

The author is deeply indebted to Colonel G. C. Jones, Jr., for permission to use from the Colonial and Evolutionary Periods of his History of Georgia and from his Confederate Addresses, any facts desired. There is no higher authority on Georgia history than Colonel Jones. His statements are absolutely true. The author has felt it a sacred duty when she did not have him for a guide, to assert nothing without good evidence most of her data being obtained from living witnesses. Colonel Jones recent death has filled our State with mourning, and literature has sustained an irreparable loss. His courteous interest and quick sympathy were an inspiration to the author in the preparation of this volume, and she takes this opportunity to lay her humble offering upon the tomb of her fathers friend, who was as distinguished for patriotism and courage as for the eloquent and scholarly pen with which he recorded the history of his beloved State.
