Not illustrated. 1844 Excerpt: ...slain, (As touching sin) hath been. No! no! of this there is no doubt, The stain of sin it will purge out, Or sink the soul to Hell: Life unto life, if we believe, Death unto death, without retrieve, The sinners savour fell. Theres no needs be that we should die, If unto Jesus now we fly, He will not cast us out: O! let us now take words and turn To him, whom we have piercd, and mourn, For us he dearly bought. AFTER A SERMON BY THE REV. J. F. ROBINSON, Easter Scnday, 1843 Luke xxiv. 34. Behold! the Lord is risn indeed! The first-fruit of the tomb! The dead in Christ shall soon be freed, And raisd to Heaven their home. The Saviour first by one is seen, Of devils dispossessd: With ardent love and grief most keen, She seeks and finds sweet rest. I too will go, and seek my Lord, But not amongst the dead: Ill take the Saviour at his word, Hes risen as he said. Go with me! men of Galilee! Ye know the markd-out mount, Where weary souls their Lord may see. And drink at blessings fount. Ill trace the footsteps of his flock, Hard by the Shepherds tent; Do not my anxious spirit mock, Ye, who as guides are sent. I seek that never-ending boon, Those pastures green and fair; Where Jesus flock doth rest at noon, Beneath their Shepherds care. AFTER A SERMON BY THE KEV. J. TEAGUE, ON WHIT-MONDAY, 1843. Though clouds and darkness veil the throne, A Rainbow crowns the head Of him, who, that he might atone For man, on Calvary bled. Yes I grace and mercy, full and free, Flow from our Refuge-lower; Unhurt we pass both land and sea, Though Satan would devour. Our bark, on heavens high Ararat, Shall Rest in Christ, the Rock, Proud gates of hell contemplate that, Een babes your power shall mock. And having crossd the mortal sea, Lifes River full shall...
